BENNET BURLEIGH, WAR WRITER, DEAD

Last of the Correspondents of the Old School Dies in London.

HE FOUGHT IN THE U. S.

Served With Confederates in Civil War-Had Many Narrow Escapes.

LONDON, June 17 .- Bennet Burleigh, the war correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, died here yesterday. He was 70 years

Bennet Burleigh was the oldest and the most widely known of English war cor-respondents. He was born in Glasgow, and came to this country early in the civil war and fought on the Confederate side. He was captured twice and sentenced to death. He represented the Central News throughout the first Egyptian war and was present at Tel-el-Kebir. He joined the staff of the Daily Telegraph in 1882, and represented that paper in the Second Phase, including the battles of El Teb and Tamai; the French camof El Teb and Tamai; the French cam-paign in Madagascar, accompanied the desert column from Korti Metammah in 1884 and was present at Abu Klea and Abu Kru. He was correspondent for the Daily Telegraph with the Ashanti expedition, the Spanish Riff campaign, in the Greek war, with the Atbara expedition, in the Egyptian war, in the South African war, the Somaliland war, the Russo-Japanese war, the Tripoli campaign and the recent war, the Tripoli campaign and the recent Balkan war.

Mr. Burleigh was the author of a number of books dealing with the various campaigns in which he took part, including "Two Campaigns" and "Empire of the East."

Percy S. Bullen, the American representative of the London Daily Telegraph who is in Quebec attending the Empress of Ireland inquiry, telegraphed to The Sun last night the following appreciation of Mr. Burleigh, whom Mr. Bullen knew intimately:

of Mr. Burleigh, whom Mr. Bullen knew intimately:

"Burleigh was probably the greatest war correspondent of the old school, and although for some mouths past he had been in failing health he died practically in harness, working to the last. I say old school advisedly because Burleigh, although he recognized the necessity or the limitations imposed upon his craft in modern warfare, was no friend of the press censor and license system. "Burleigh owed his success largely to his early training in America, where he fought during the civil war on the side of the South. Twice I have heard him tell how he was sentenced to death as a tell how he was sentenced to death as a spy, but Burleigh was born lucky and twice he escaped. "Burleigh was not only the best known
